KNEE-KILLER CONUNDRUM

When you run these meetings, your "knees start to hurt" because they are low in value for at least some participants and are also not structured well for the purpose of the meeting. Put meetings into this quadrant to find alternatives.

GAMEPLAN GLITCHES

Everyone love playing "ball": These meetings have a high value for the participants. But wait! Which ball game are you actually playing? Nobody knows, these meetings are fun, but messy, the structure doesn't suit the meeting purpose.

CHAMPION STANDARD

These are the meetings that take you all the way to the olympic games. They have a high value for all participants and their structure suits the purpose. These are the meetings you can learn from.

AGENDA ELEMENTS

The meeting structure supports participants in understanding what to expect from the meeting and how to prepare. Agenda elements are needed to achieve a clear outcome.

ATMOSPHERE

An adequate atmosphere is key for impactful meetings. The "right" atmosphere depends on the purpose of the meeting as well as on the needs of the participants.

ROLES

"Why exactly am I here in this meeting? And who facilitates?" If you know this situation, it could be useful to think about clear roles and responsibilities.
